N.B Volunteers; understanding their role as un-paid workers seeking field experience, they would be greatly facilitated in their efforts to further IHO mission by a stipend of 50% of their minimum living cost. This would allow them to stay for a longer period of time and providing their skills and expertise in IHO projects. Youthful volunteers are a valuable asset and preferable employees as to their minimal costs but also because of their hard working, enthusiasm to learn, and gain the most out of this field experience. Furthermore they are armed with the most up-to-date knowledge of their field, current IT technology and flexible to learning and experiencing different realities. Volunteers are also likely to become IHO advocates and representatives when they return to their home countries and can continue to facilitate IHO objectives abroad.
